

Please tell me a story about an experience you had with coyotes in Vermont.

I have lived here my entire life, I'm 46 years old. I've had several experiences with coyotes but my most fond one is if you wake up early in the morning you can hear the coyotes talk to each other where we live. We live in the valley in the Green Mountains and so you can hear coyotes on one side of the mountain speaking to each other on the mountain and they seem to have a lingo going back and forth. I also love it when their pups are first born because you can hear them chatter.

Why was that story meaningful to you?

It's just beautiful to hear.

On a scale of 1 to 5 with one being very negative 3 being either negative or positive and five being very positive what would you rate this story?

I would say this is a five because it really brings me joy.

Think back to his coyote story you shared can you tell me where it took place
